

SEYDELL FIRED WHILE RUNNING AT HIS VICTIM

PUTS SALT IN HIS SOCKS.
That is why and up-state man never has a cold.
WINSTED, Conn., Dec. 15.—Landlord John Barton of Winsted, N. Y., claims he had not had a cold in twenty years.
"I put a little salt in my stockings every time I change them, and that explains it," said Barton to-day.

—

Witness at Trial of Broker for Murder Describes Scene of Shooting.

(Model to the World.)

KINGSTON, N. Y., Dec. 15.—That Louis Victor Seydell, the New York broker, ran toward Clement Demarion just before he fired the fatal shot was proved by the prosecution to-day. Seydell is charged with murder in the first degree.

Jeanne Taront, an Italian employed by Demarion who does not speak English, was on the stand most of the morning session. His story confirms that told by Antonio M. Cella, of New York City, who also witnessed the killing. Both witnesses agreed that after Seydell had ordered Demarion not to allow his team to pass where the broker was then standing, he went to his house through the woods. After Demarion, his friends and the wagon had passed the point and reached the Seydell cottage Seydell came on a run towards them, loading his revolver. As Demarion rushed forward Seydell retreated until he finished loading. Then, said Taront, the broker came running towards him, firing his revolver as he ran.

The identity of the stranger subpoenaed in court late yesterday afternoon by District Attorney Cunningham was revealed to-day. He is an Italian detective employed by the defense who, disguised as a painter, has been working on the case.

Antonio M. Cella, recalled, gave in imperfect English a translation of what the defense terms was an "oath of vengeance," taken over the dead body of Demarion at his funeral. As Cella's repeated it it seems to have been an expression of sympathy for the family and a hope that the murderer would receive justice in this world.

Deputy Sheriff Seth Jocelyn, who searched the Seydell premises soon after the killing, testified that the 44 calibre revolver, fully loaded in Seydell's coat case.

A Bitter Blow.
(From the Pittsburg Post.)
"Why are you so bitter against Uncle Nebuchadnezzar?"
"He lost his money shortly after we named the baby for him."

Do not contain Opium
The People's Remedy for Coughs, Colds, Croup, Whooping-Cough, Bronchitis, Grippe-Cough, Hoarseness, etc.
SAMPLE FREE
Write today. Mention this paper. Address A. G. MEYER & CO., BALTIMORE, MD.

Stern Brothers

direct attention to their large assortments of

Leather Articles

Among which are many Imported Novelties, Very Suitable for Holiday Gifts.

Including the following Special Values

Imported Hand Bags, of back and colored morocco, silk lined, with purse,	$5.85
Imported Jewel Bags, of pig skin, suede lined,	at $4.75, 5.95
Medicine Cases, of red and green morocco, with seven bottles, scissors, plaster, etc.,	at 2.95
Sewing Boxes, of colored morocco, full fitted,	$1.10, 1.25, 1.75

In their Greatly Enlarged Department for Blankets and Comfortables

On the Third Floor, New Building,

they are showing

High Cost Imported and Domestic Blankets and Down Quilts

In exclusive designs and colorings, at moderate prices.

Also for To-morrow

Blankets { Single Size	at $3.98, 5.25
Double Size,	" 4.75, 6.00
Extra Large Size,	" 5.50, 6.95

Lambs Wool Comfortables, (Double Size)
Dotted Silk Mull, neat floral designs, plain borders, at $4.85
Printed Silk Messaline, novelty effects, plain borders, " 6.50

Stock Reduction Sale of

Brass and Enamelled Bedsteads and Bedding

Brass Bedsteads, English Lacquer, at $11.00 to 44.00
Formerly $15.00 to 52.50

Enamelled Bedsteads, at $4.75 to 14.00
Formerly $6.50 to 17.50

Upholstered Springs, at $10.50 to 16.50
Formerly $12.50 to 21.75

Woven Steel Springs, at $3.50 to 6.75
Formerly $4.50 to 8.00

Special Black Hair Mattresses, 3 ft. 4 ft. 4 ft. 6
Made in Our Own Workrooms, $12.50 17.50 20.00
Formerly $15.00, 20.00 and 25.00

West 23d and 22d Streets

That is why and up-state man never has a cold.

WINSTED, Conn., Dec. 15.—Landlord John Barton of Winsted, N. Y., claims he had not had a cold in twenty years.

"I put a little salt in my stockings every time I change them, and that explains it," said Barton to-day.

—

Witness at Trial of Broker for

Murder Describes Scene
of Shooting.

(Model to the World.)

KINGSTON, N. Y., Dec. 15.—That Louis Victor Seydell, the New York broker, ran toward Clement Demarion just before he fired the fatal shot was proved by the prosecution to-day. Seydell is charged with murder in the first degree.

Jeanne Taront, an Italian employed by Demarion who does not speak English, was on the stand most of the morning session. His story confirms that told by Antonio M. Cella, of New York City, who also witnessed the killing. Both witnesses agreed that after Seydell had ordered Demarion not to allow his team to pass where the broker was then standing, he went to his house through the woods. After Demarion, his friends and the wagon had passed the point and reached the Seydell cottage Seydell came on a run towards them, loading his revolver. As Demarion rushed forward Seydell retreated until he finished loading. Then, said Taront, the broker came running towards him, firing his revolver as he ran.

The identity of the stranger subpoenaed in court late yesterday afternoon by District Attorney Cunningham was revealed to-day. He is an Italian detective employed by the defense who, disguised as a painter, has been working on the case.

Antonio M. Cella, recalled, gave in imperfect English a translation of what the defense terms was an "oath of vengeance," taken over the dead body of Demarion at his funeral. As Cella's repeated it it seems to have been an expression of sympathy for the family and a hope that the murderer would receive justice in this world.

Deputy Sheriff Seth Jocelyn, who searched the Seydell premises soon after the killing, testified that the 44 calibre revolver, fully loaded in Seydell's coat case.

A Bitter Blow.
(From the Pittsburg Post.)

"Why are you so bitter against Uncle Nebuchadnezzar?"

"He lost his money shortly after we named the baby for him."

—

Witness at Trial of Broker for

Murder Describes Scene
of Shooting.

(Model to the World.)

KINGSTON, N. Y., Dec. 15.—That Louis Victor Seydell, the New York broker, ran toward Clement Demarion just before he fired the fatal shot was proved by the prosecution to-day. Seydell is charged with murder in the first degree.

Jeanne Taront, an Italian employed by Demarion who does not speak English, was on the stand most of the morning session. His story confirms that told by Antonio M. Cella, of New York City, who also witnessed the killing. Both witnesses agreed that after Seydell had ordered Demarion not to allow his team to pass where the broker was then standing, he went to his house through the woods. After Demarion, his friends and the wagon had passed the point and reached the Seydell cottage Seydell came on a run towards them, loading his revolver. As Demarion rushed forward Seydell retreated until he finished loading. Then, said Taront, the broker came running towards him, firing his revolver as he ran.

The identity of the stranger subpoenaed in court late yesterday afternoon by District Attorney Cunningham was revealed to-day. He is an Italian detective employed by the defense who, disguised as a painter, has been working on the case.

Antonio M. Cella, recalled, gave in imperfect English a translation of what the defense terms was an "oath of vengeance," taken over the dead body of Demarion at his funeral. As Cella's repeated it it seems to have been an expression of sympathy for the family and a hope that the murderer would receive justice in this world.

Deputy Sheriff Seth Jocelyn, who searched the Seydell premises soon after the killing, testified that the 44 calibre revolver, fully loaded in Seydell's coat case.

A Bitter Blow.
(From the Pittsburg Post.)

"Why are you so bitter against Uncle Nebuchadnezzar?"

"He lost his money shortly after we named the baby for him."

—

Witness at Trial of Broker for

Murder Describes Scene
of Shooting.

(Model to the World.)

KINGSTON, N. Y., Dec. 15.—That Louis Victor Seydell, the New York broker, ran toward Clement Demarion just before he fired the fatal shot was proved by the prosecution to-day. Seydell is charged with murder in the first degree.

Jeanne Taront, an Italian employed by Demarion who does not speak English, was on the stand most of the morning session. His story confirms that told by Antonio M. Cella, of New York City, who also witnessed the killing. Both witnesses agreed that after Seydell had ordered Demarion not to allow his team to pass where the broker was then standing, he went to his house through the woods. After Demarion, his friends and the wagon had passed the point and reached the Seydell cottage Seydell came on a run towards them, loading his revolver. As Demarion rushed forward Seydell retreated until he finished loading. Then, said Taront, the broker came running towards him, firing his revolver as he ran.

The identity of the stranger subpoenaed in court late yesterday afternoon by District Attorney Cunningham was revealed to-day. He is an Italian detective employed by the defense who, disguised as a painter, has been working on the case.

Antonio M. Cella, recalled, gave in imperfect English a translation of what the defense terms was an "oath of vengeance," taken over the dead body of Demarion at his funeral. As Cella's repeated it it seems to have been an expression of sympathy for the family and a hope that the murderer would receive justice in this world.

Deputy Sheriff Seth Jocelyn, who searched the Seydell premises soon after the killing, testified that the 44 calibre revolver, fully loaded in Seydell's coat case.

A Bitter Blow.
(From the Pittsburg Post.)

"Why are you so bitter against Uncle Nebuchadnezzar?"

"He lost his money shortly after we named the baby for him."

—

Witness at Trial of Broker for

Murder Describes Scene
of Shooting.

(Model to the World.)

KINGSTON, N. Y., Dec. 15.—That Louis Victor Seydell, the New York broker, ran toward Clement Demarion just before he fired the fatal shot was proved by the prosecution to-day. Seydell is charged with murder in the first degree.

Jeanne Taront, an Italian employed by Demarion who does not speak English, was on the stand most of the morning session. His story confirms that told by Antonio M. Cella, of New York City, who also witnessed the killing. Both witnesses agreed that after Seydell had ordered Demarion not to allow his team to pass where the broker was then standing, he went to his house through the woods. After Demarion, his friends and the wagon had passed the point and reached the Seydell cottage Seydell came on a run towards them, loading his revolver. As Demarion rushed forward Seydell retreated until he finished loading. Then, said Taront, the broker came running towards him, firing his revolver as he ran.

The identity of the stranger subpoenaed in court late yesterday afternoon by District Attorney Cunningham was revealed to-day. He is an Italian detective employed by the defense who, disguised as a painter, has been working on the case.

Antonio M. Cella, recalled, gave in imperfect English a translation of what the defense terms was an "oath of vengeance," taken over the dead body of Demarion at his funeral. As Cella's repeated it it seems to have been an expression of sympathy for the family and a hope that the murderer would receive justice in this world.

Deputy Sheriff Seth Jocelyn, who searched the Seydell premises soon after the killing, testified that the 44 calibre revolver, fully loaded in Seydell's coat case.

A Bitter Blow.
(From the Pittsburg Post.)

"Why are you so bitter against Uncle Nebuchadnezzar?"

"He lost his money shortly after we named the baby for him."

—

Witness at Trial of Broker for

Murder Describes Scene
of Shooting.

(Model to the World.)

KINGSTON, N. Y., Dec. 15.—That Louis Victor Seydell, the New York broker, ran toward Clement Demarion just before he fired the fatal shot was proved by the prosecution to-day. Seydell is charged with murder in the first degree.

Jeanne Taront, an Italian employed by Demarion who does not speak English, was on the stand most of the morning session. His story confirms that told by Antonio M. Cella, of New York City, who also witnessed the killing. Both witnesses agreed that after Seydell had ordered Demarion not to allow his team to pass where the broker was then standing, he went to his house through the woods. After Demarion, his friends and the wagon had passed the point and reached the Seydell cottage Seydell came on a run towards them, loading his revolver. As Demarion rushed forward Seydell retreated until he finished loading. Then, said Taront, the broker came running towards him, firing his revolver as he ran.

The identity of the stranger subpoenaed in court late yesterday afternoon by District Attorney Cunningham was revealed to-day. He is an Italian detective employed by the defense who, disguised as a painter, has been working on the case.

Antonio M. Cella, recalled, gave in imperfect English a translation of what the defense terms was an "oath of vengeance," taken over the dead body of Demarion at his funeral. As Cella's repeated it it seems to have been an expression of sympathy for the family and a hope that the murderer would receive justice in this world.

Deputy Sheriff Seth Jocelyn, who searched the Seydell premises soon after the killing, testified that the 44 calibre revolver, fully loaded in Seydell's coat case.

A Bitter Blow.
(From the Pittsburg Post.)

"Why are you so bitter against Uncle Nebuchadnezzar?"

"He lost his money shortly after we named the baby for him."

—

Witness at Trial of Broker for

Murder Describes Scene
of Shooting.

(Model to the World.)

KINGSTON, N. Y., Dec. 15.—That Louis Victor Seydell, the New York broker, ran toward Clement Demarion just before he fired the fatal shot was proved by the prosecution to-day. Seydell is charged with murder in the first degree.

Jeanne Taront, an Italian employed by Demarion who does not speak English, was on the stand most of the morning session. His story confirms that told by Antonio M. Cella, of New York City, who also witnessed the killing. Both witnesses agreed that after Seydell had ordered Demarion not to allow his team to pass where the broker was then standing, he went to his house through the woods. After Demarion, his friends and the wagon had passed the point and reached the Seydell cottage Seydell came on a run towards them, loading his revolver. As Demarion rushed forward Seydell retreated until he finished loading. Then, said Taront, the broker came running towards him, firing his revolver as he ran.

The identity of the stranger subpoenaed in court late yesterday afternoon by District Attorney Cunningham was revealed to-day. He is an Italian detective employed by the defense who, disguised as a painter, has been working on the case.

Antonio M. Cella, recalled, gave in imperfect English a